

Gender Justice Critical in COP-27 for a Climate-Just World.

Every year, world leaders, ministers, and negotiators come together in a global event known as the Conference of Parties (COP). During this international event, all states that are signatories to the United Nations Framework on Climate Change and the Paris Agreement gather to agree on how to jointly address climate change and its impacts.

In an article published in the New Vision, Ms. Joan Akiiza, the NAPE Senior Programme Officer for Gender and Legal Affairs, highlights the importance of gender justice and climate justice in the debates of COP 27 that is currently underway in sharma Sheik, Egypt. Click here for the full article.
